The main target species are roach, and skimmers with bags of over 20lb recorded. Good numbers of tench are present along with perch and to a lesser extent eels, carp, chub and rudd.

Good numbers of pike of all sizes are resident throughout the stretch.

Most anglers use the pole as the main method of attack, waggler and feeder tactics all work in the right peg. Main baits are maggot, pinkie, squat and caster but never forget to take some hemp as this usually sorts out the better quality roach. Tench fall to corn, worm or bread and lure fishing for pike and perch can be productive.

Matches are regularly fished on the canal and any club can book a length, availability permitting, by contacting the waters secretary. Fishing stations are being constructed by local members and provide comfortable fishing along the fishery.

For the canal follow the A19 from York to Selby.

At the basin end, parking is available behind the industrial estate, along the bank adjacent to the fishing platforms.

At the Brayton Bridge end, parking is available over the bridge on the right hand side. Turn right off the A1041, after passing the A63 junction, crossing the railway and the canal.

Fishing is left hand bank from Brayton Bridge to the Doncaster road bridge, then right hand bank down to the basin.
